Pickard Theater, Memorial Hall

A visionary educator and passionate advocate for children, community redevelopment, and education reform, Geoff Canada received Bowdoin's "rst Common Good Award and was awarded the College's highest honor, the Bowdoin Prize, in 2015.

GEOFFREY CANADA is a leading advocate for children and innovator in the "eld of education. Geoff grew up in one of the most devastated communities in the United States, the South Bronx, raised by a single mother. He earned his bachelor's degree from Bowdoin, and eventually went on to earn a master's degree at Harvard University. He devoted his life to help children who grew up in disadvantaged circumstances to succeed through education. Geoff created the Harlem Children's Zone, a birth-through-college network of programs that today serves more than 13,000 low-income students and families in a ninety-seven-block area of Central Harlem in New York City. The unprecedented success of the Harlem Children's Zone has attracted the attention of the media and leaders around the world. In 2011, Geoff was named one of the world's most influential people by Time magazine and as one of the "50 Greatest Entrepreneurs by Entrepreneur magazine.

President Barack Obama created the Promise Neighborhoods Initiative to replicate the Harlem Children's Zone model across the country. Geoff has been profiled extensively in The New York Times, the Wall Street Journal, The Oprah Winfrey Show, among others.

He was featured in the documentary about the dire state of African education Superman and has received more than twenty "ve honorary degrees, including from Harvard, Princeton, Columbia, Dartmouth, and the University of Pennsylvania. He has also inspired a new generation of education reformers through his writings, having published essays in The New York Times, The New York Daily News, The Chronicle of Philanthropy, and two critically acclaimed books on poverty and education: Reaching Up for Manhood and After Thirty Years. After thirty years with the organization, Geoff stepped down in 2014 as chief executive of the Harlem Children's Zone but continues to serve as president.
